THOMAS LAXTON AND GRADUS

These two Peas have bounded into popularity and have made an immense amount of money for market growers all over the country. They are both very remarkable Peas and are very near alike in their characteristics and quality. They are very early (almost as early as the Extra-Early types), very large-podded, wrinkled peas, growing vigorously, with vines 2½ feet high. It is astonishing that Peas with such fine large pods should be so early in maturing.

BLACKBERRIES

The Black Diamond Blackberries

The Black Diamond Blackberry was originated some years ago by George H. Liepe from the seed of the old Evergreen, a variety of the Cut Leaf class of Blackberries. The plants are very vigorous and stocky, thus enabling them to carry to maturity their immense loads of perfect fruit. The foliage remains remarkably green till late in autumn. It is also free from rust and is not troubled with borers or rose scale.

THE FRUIT—The fruit is jet black and firm, and will not soften either on the bush or after it has been picked. It has an exceptionally fine flavor, spicy and melting. The berry is about the size of the Erie or Ohmer, an abundant bearer, frequently perfecting as many as 2000 berries on one vine and frequently as many as nine quarts have been gathered from a single vine.

EASILY HARVESTED—The berries hang in large drooping clusters, well elevated above the bush, and in gathering the fruit the pickers do not come in contact with the thorns as is the case with other varieties. The plants grow to considerable size and form hedge-like rows, but no clusters of fruit are hedged in. All are easily gathered from the outside of the bush.

SHIPPING QUALITY—In shipping quality it is far above all others. The Black Diamond can be shipped long distances, being a hard, jet blackberry that will remain firm and glossy for a week after picking. This berry always finds a ready market, as its season is later than that of any other Dewberry or Blackberry, and therefore always sells at the highest prices obtainable for such fine fruit. Its season commences August 1st and continues to September 1st.

CULTURE—The Black Diamond is very easily grown, adapted as it is to a great variety of soils. It will thrive well on poor, sandy land and yield heavy crops where nothing else will grow.

The young canes droop to the ground, Dewberry-like, and are tied to 3-ft. stakes or wires. Culture is the same as with ordinary Blackberry.

OUTLASTS ANY OTHER—Most Blackberries decline in productiveness after the fourth or fifth year. The Black Diamond will bear well for 20 years. I have a field of Black Diamonds now in its 9th year, bearing its best crop thus far, and are all strong, healthy vines.

PRICES—40c each, $2 doz., 50 $6, by mail; 100, $10; 500, $30; 1000, $50, by express.

TESTIMONIAL—I give the following unsolicited testimonial from a commission merchant to a test to the value of this berry:

Mr. Michael N. Borgo, Vineland, N. J.:

Dear Sir—We beg to enclose check for your shipment of Black Diamond Blackberries for the week ending August 15th, 1910.

We are pleased to say that your Black Diamond Blackberries are giving excellent satisfaction to our trade this season, as well as they did other years. We find that there is a steady increased demand from our customers for this particular berry, as it excels all others in the market at this time of the year, owing to its shipping qualities, as well as its glossy black appearance. It is also such a desirable berry because it ripens when all others are about done. Once a customer buys them he will not be without them.

We are sorry to say that we cannot fill all our orders for this berry, as the demand is much larger than the supply. We could use to good advantage anywhere from two hundred to three hundred crates daily at a high figure to fulfill the wants of our trade.

So let them come along every day. We remain,

Yours very truly,

H. C. VOGEL & Co.
